

Why is there a growing demand for PSWs?

Canada has an aging population that is increasing steadily. As a result, health care is the fastest growing job sector in Canada and PSWs are in high demand across all regions.

More and more families are turning to home and community care to help loved ones age in the comforts of their own home. Many people rely on PSWs to help them remain safe and comfortable at home, and to live their lives with dignity.

As the needs of our aging population expand, PSWs are also finding more employment opportunities in other healthcare institutions, such as long term care homes, hospices, rehabilitation centres, assisted living centres and hospitals.

Saint Elizabeth Health Career College is preparing a new generation of health care providers with the knowledge and skills they need to support an aging population and thrive in the health and wellness workforce.
